

Meet the 2005 CJON Associate Editors

Here are the oncology nurses who are the associate editors of the Clinical Journal of Oncology Nursing (CJON) for 2005. They are all clinicians who care for patients with cancer on a day-to-day basis and support the mission of CJON, which is to provide practical information necessary for direct care of patients and their families across the cancer continuum. Each associate editor coordinates one or more columns, and all are receptive to working with readers who are interested in authoring columns. The associate editors also welcome your comments, ideas, and suggestions for column topics. Contact information for each associate editor can be found at the end of each editor's role description.

Jeannine M. Brant, RN, MS, AOCN®, is an oncology clinical nurse specialist and pain consultant at St. Vincent Healthcare in Billings, MT. She also is a cancer support group facilitator, chair of the pain task force, executive committee member of the institutional review board, and a member of the Nursing Clinical Advancement Committee, a clinical ladder program for nurses who work at the bedside. Jeannine has a keen interest in working with Native American patients and is the consultant for the Women Reaching for Wellness program, a breast and cervical cancer outreach program that serves women living on Native American reservations throughout Montana. Jeannine is an affiliate assistant professor in the College of Nursing at Montana State University in Bozeman. She also is a member of the Oncology Nursing Society (ONS) Pain Management and Transcultural Nursing Issues Special Interest Groups.

Jeannine is the associate editor for the "Patient Education" and "Picture This" columns. She can be reached at 406-237-3084 or jeannine.brant@svh-mt.org.

Colleen L. Corish, RN, MN, OCN®, is the clinical director for Oncology and Medical Surgical Services at the Medical University of South Carolina and Hollings Cancer Center in Charleston. Colleen provides leadership and direction to Oncology and Medical Surgical Services, which includes all administrative, clinical, and support activities. Her areas of responsibility consist of six medical/surgical and oncology inpatient units, the hemapheresis service, radiation oncology services, and the Supportive and Palliative Care Program. She also has oversight of the clinical functions of the Hollings Cancer Center, which averages approximately 40,000 clinic and infusion visits per year. Colleen has participated in many national and local ONS activities. She was a member of the Steering Council from 2000–2004 and has been a member of her local chapter board for the past six years.

Colleen is the associate editor for the "Leadership Corner" column and can be reached at 843-792-3246 or corishcl@musc.edu.

Catherine C. Burke, MS, APRN, BC, ANP, AOCN®, is an adult nurse practitioner in the Laura Lee Blanton Gynecologic Oncology Center at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, where she has been employed for the past 12 years. Previously, she was an oncology nurse educator in the Cancer Prevention Program. Catherine has been an oncology nurse for more than 25 years and has enjoyed a long relationship with ONS. She has served as a member of the Clinical Practice Committee, is a past president of the Houston Chapter of ONS, and currently is a trustee for the ONS Foundation. In addition to being the published author of several book chapters and articles on a variety of oncology topics, she edited Psychosocial Dimensions of Oncology Nursing Care.

Catherine is the associate editor for the "Diagnostic Reasoning" column. She can be reached at 713-563-4541 or cburke@mdanderson.org.

Deborah Davison, MSN, NP-C, CRNP, is a nurse practitioner and works as a protocol specialist for the National Surgical Adjuvant Breast and Bowel Project (NSABP) at its headquarters in Pittsburgh, PA. She has clinical experience in a variety of oncology settings, including orthopedic oncology, hematology/oncology, bone marrow and stem cell transplantation, and medical oncology, and has worked in oncology for the past 14 years. In her current position, Deb is a member of the team responsible for the development of clinical trial protocols and particularly is involved with the clinical aspects of the trials.

In addition to her position at NSABP, Deb is an adjunct faculty member at LaRoche College in Pittsburgh, with teaching responsibility for graduate nursing students in the family nurse practitioner program.

Deb is the associate editor for the "Novel Modalities" column and can be reached at 412-366-6805 or dddavison9@netzero.com.

William P. Hogle, RN, BSN, OCN®, is a patient care manager in the cancer center at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center (UPMC) at Passavant Hospital in Pennsylvania. He has been an oncology nurse for the past 16 years and most recently has worked in the field of radiation therapy. As manager of departmental resources and personnel, Bill is responsible for supervising and assisting in the day-to-day nursing care provided to the adult population that the cancer center serves. He also coordinates a multi-institutional prostate brachytherapy program for the UPMC Health System. Bill is a member of Sigma Theta Tau and the Greater Pittsburgh Chapter of ONS, where he has served as a director-at-large. He also is an active member of the ONS Radiation Special Interest Group, where he participates in its nurse expert panel. He has been a contributing author to professional newsletters, CJON, and the latest edition of the Manual for Radiation Oncology Nursing Practice and Education.

Bill is the associate editor for the “Test Your Knowledge” and “News Briefs” columns and can be reached at 412-367-6454 or hoglewp@ph.upmc.edu.

Suzanne M. Mahon, RN, DNSc, AOCN®, APNG, is an assistant clinical professor in the Division of Hematology and Oncology at Saint Louis University in Missouri. Suzanne is responsible for cancer control activities in the division, including cancer genetics education for at-risk patients and their families. In addition, she provides education and services for long-term follow-up in cancer survivors. Suzanne is also an adjunct associate clinical professor in the School of Nursing at Saint Louis University. She currently serves as the editor of the ONS Prevention/Early Detection Special Interest Group Newsletter. She is a past president of the St. Louis Chapter of ONS and currently helps with the program planning committee.

Suzanne is the associate editor for the “Evidence-Based Practice” column. She can be reached at 314-577-8854 or mahonsm@slu.edu.

CDR Colleen O. Lee, RN, MS, AOCN®, is an advanced practice oncology nurse who serves as a program manager in the National Cancer Institute’s (NCI’s) Office of Cancer Complementary and Alternative Medicine in Rockville, MD. Colleen oversees the daily activities of the NCI Best Case Series Program, a program established to review retrospective clinical data for patients who receive alternative therapies as treatment for cancer. Colleen is a commissioned officer in the U.S. Public Health Service, holds the rank of commander, and serves as co-chair for the Publications Committee. Prior to her present position as an associate editor for CJON, Colleen served on the review boards for CJON and the Oncology Nursing Forum. She lectures locally, nationally, and internationally on topics related to oncology and complementary and alternative medicine.

Colleen is the associate editor for the “Integrated Care” column and can be reached at 301-594-5839 or leeco@mail.nih.gov.

Joyce Marrs, MS, APRN-BC, OCN®, has been an oncology nurse for 10 years. She graduated in 2004 from the family nurse practitioner program at Wright State University in Dayton, OH, and currently works as a nurse practitioner for Hematology and Oncology Associates of Dayton. Her role as a nurse practitioner involves caring for patients in the office, hospital, and palliative care setting. Prior to working as a nurse practitioner, her oncology background was in the administration of chemotherapy in an outpatient office setting and inpatient hospice care. Joyce is active in the West Central Ohio Chapter of ONS along with Outreach Ohio, a collaboration of all Ohio ONS chapter leaders.

Joyce is the associate editor of the “Case Analysis” column. She can be contacted at 937-832-1093 or joycemrn@sbcglobal.net.

Put Your Knowledge and Expertise to Work by Becoming a CJON Reviewer

Do you enjoy reading about advances in oncology nursing? Do you like to evaluate new symptom management approaches? Do you want to help select the articles published in the Clinical Journal of Oncology Nursing (CJON)? If so, consider applying your knowledge by becoming a CJON reviewer.

The CJON Review Board is composed of oncology nurses who enjoy reading and evaluating the work of their colleagues. Reviewers critique approximately four to six manuscripts per year and offer guidance to authors as they work toward publication in CJON.

Reviewers are valued volunteers who contribute their professional knowledge and clinical expertise to CJON and are credited on the masthead of each issue.

For an application, call the Oncology Nursing Society Publishing Division at 412-859-6271 or e-mail pubCJON@ons.org.